BUDDHISM TO BE RIVAL OF CHRISTIANITY IN FAR EAST

Oxford Professor Does Not Fear China's Cults

WORKING IN WEST

Christians May Have To Work With Buddhists, He Says

(Reuter's Service)

London, Aug. 24.—Addressing the Modern Churchmen's Conference at Oxford, the Rev. W. E. Soothill, Professor of Chinese at Oxford University, said that religious rivalry in the Far East was more likely to be between Christianity and Buddhism rather than Confucianism or Taoism. While Christianity was writhing in its own bonds—which would eventually burst—Buddhism had none; it could adopt and adapt at will. Japanese Buddhism had recently adopted Christian methods wholesale and the movement was spreading to China.

Buddhist ideas were also at work in the West, even in the Churches. The day might come when the best men in Christianity and Buddhism would meet to discuss the possibility of working together for the salvation of the world through love. Meanwhile Christianity must with courtesy offer its doctrines in place of those taught by the Buddhists, with which, in conclusion, Mr. Soothill drew a contrast in no way favorable to the latter.

JAPANESE SHIP GOES AGROUND IN RIVER HERE

Nikko Maru Of N.Y.K. Hits Mud Bank On Pootung Side

The N. Y. K. steamer Nikko Maru, coming up river shortly after noon yesterday to dock at the N. Y. K. wharf, went hard aground on the Pootung side of the river, opposite the Public Gardens, and the efforts of tugs to pull her free during the afternoon were unavailing. It was thought that she could be moved off the mud bank at high tide last night or this morning. The Nikko comes to Shanghai from Japan ports.

DOG DAYS STUFF

By Westa

"THERE has been much criticism in the press of the umpiring during the series in which we have taken part," said Major Dent, manager of the Fort Mills baseball team at the Rotary Club luncheon yesterday. "Let me say," he continued, "the work of the officials here is much better than in Tientsin and Peking, and ranks higher than even the work of the Manila league umpires."

FRESH strawberries in August! That surely is a dish to make one's mouth water. Last evening Missy .... came through (after numerous hints) with one of her all too infrequent dinner invitations but nearly spoiled it by adding: "Better cultivate a big appetite and come early, 'cause we're going to have strawberrrry shortcake."

Strawberry shortcake! In August! What thing, I thought. Has Missy gone and hired some new cook who entertains the fool notion that he can manufacture a strawberry shortcake with the stewed and sirupy and acidulous concoctions put out in tin cans with a "strawberry jam" label by the Chicago pork packers as a side line to their regular business?

The very thought of that kind of a strawberry shortcake, which seemed the only one within the range of possibility now that we had reached the Dog Day season, sort of made me think for a moment that it might have been just as well if I had been out when Missy telephoned her invitation, and to speculating upon what might be listed in the way of American edibles on those foolish French menu cards which nobody can read at the American club.

Shades of Lucius Licinius Lucullus! Spirits of John J Banquetier! Ghosts of Old Man Gastronomus himself! Here came the boy, presently, with a real, honest-to-goodness strawberry shortcake that would knock your eye plumb and completely and everlastingly out!

I was still nursing my mental picture of a Dog Days shortcake—a flat chested, drippy, soggified and oozy disc of dough with perhaps the mangled remains of canned berries flattened and squashed between its layers, and clinging in shreds to the sides of it.

But here was a regular shortcake—one of those properly corded up kind with first a layer of shortened, crisply browned biscuit dough crust, then a layer of regular, upstanding, rosy cheeked strawberries, then another layer of crust, then another tier of strawberries, then another crust, then some more strawberries, and so on and on up to the roof garden, which was all covered over with a thick layer of whipped cream.

There were little flecks of cream and little rivulets of strawberry juice on the sides of it and around the bottom of it, as though, unable to hold all of its delicious goodness, some of the smaller strawberries had been crowded out. It was simply bustin' with delight, overflowing with happiness, weighted down with good news, bubbling over with pleasant surprises, gurgling with joy. Oh, boy, I'll tell the world here was a whole orchestra of baked music.

I hear a chorus of Missies asking: "Where did she get the strawberries?"

Well, here's some good news for all the Missies in town: The strawberries came from Seattle, and if an experiment that is now being tried by one of the local importing firms pans out they will soon be a regular thing on the market here, the whole year 'round.

The strawberries, while not what you might call "hot off the vines," are as fresh and whole as when picked. They come in glass jars uncooked, and packed in sugar only. They have all the flavor and almost the same appearance as fresh picked berries, and being from Seattle, of course they do not have to be scalded or boiled in carbolic acid before it is safe to eat them.

EXECUTIVES QUIT PARLEY, RAIL PEACE FADES IN U.S.

House Passes Administration's Commissions Bill

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Aug. 24.—The prospect of a settlement of the railway strike seemed to have diminished late yesterday afternoon when the majority of the executives left the meeting-place, their spokesman saying that they were still satisfied with their previous stand against restoring the strikers' seniority. A few Western executives, however, are still endeavoring to ease the situation.

Washington, August 24.—The House of Representatives yesterday passed by 219 votes to 55 the Administration Bill for the creation of a Federal Commission to obtain all the facts relating to the coal industry.

Washington, August 22.—The Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor has made an appeal to all union men in behalf of the striking shopmen of the American railroads stating "they are fighting the fight for all workers and should have the moral and financial support of every laber man in the United States in their struggle.

"Americans who love justice and fair dealing as well as all thinkers and workers know that the policy of the railroads is the same as the policies of all employers since the Armistice was signed—they are seeking by every effort to weaken and destroy the voluntary workers organisations.

"The decision of the Railroad Board compelled the strikers to accept a wage cut of 23 cents an hour. We hope every labor union will again demonstrate their solidarity by generously and immediately coming to the assistance of the strikers."

The appeal was signed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Armed Robbers Lock Victims In Room And Get Away With $760

The robbers locked some of the occupants of the house in a bedroom, and forced the owner to give them the keys to two safes. No shots were fired and no alarm was raised, and although the robbery occurred early in the morning no report was made to the police until after 9 o'clock.

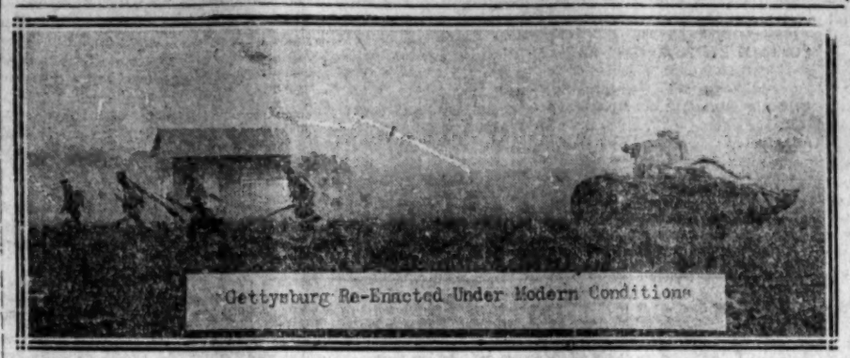
Re-Enact Gettysburg Under Modern Conditions



Gettysburg Re-Enacted Under Modern Conditions

AFTER the Fourth of July celebration at Gettysburg, where U. S. Marines re-enacted the battle exactly as it was fought in the Sixties, the Marines fought the battle again—this time under modern conditions. Airplanes made reconnoissance flights, fought air battles and shot down observation balloons. Heavy artillery laid down interdiction fire, and light artillery threw its barrage. Machine guns covered the advance of the troops, with whippet and big tanks wiping out machine-gun nests. Men who observed the two methods of attack marveled that men could live under modern conditions in such advances.

COLLINS KILLED WHILE ON VISIT TO ARMY POSTS

Leader Only Member Of Party Slain By Attackers

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 23.—Particulars of the attack on Mr. Michael Collins now coming to hand show that a large party of irregulars attacked the party with which he was travelling.

The attack was beaten off with the aid of an armored car and heavy casualties inflicted on the irregulars.

A bullet struck Mr. Collins in the forehead towards the end of the fight and he expired in a few minutes.

His last words were:

"Forgive them."

His body was taken into Cork and transferred to a steamer for conveyance to Dublin for burial.

It appears that the ambushers outnumbered Mr. Collins's party by 10 persons to one. The party, which included General Dalton and General O'Connell, left Cork at six o'clock on Tuesday morning on a tour of inspection of the Free State posts, returning to Cork from Bandon in the evening.

The party was compelled to make a detour owing to interruption of the main roads. It was passing the wild rugged hilly district of Bealnabats when 200 irregulars emerged and attacked the handful of 20 persons accompanying Mr. Collins.

The latter, however, used the armored car effectively, playing havoc with the irregulars' ranks.

Mr. Collins jumped out of the car and used a rifle.

The fight lasted an hour and had practically finished to the advantage of the Free State party when Mr. Collins fell.

Mr. Collins was the only Free Stater killed but three were wounded.

Tram And Motor Truck In Smashup On Szechuen Road

A crash between a tram car and a motor sprinkling cart which caused considerable damage to both vehicles occurred shortly before 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon on North Szechuen Road near the Kudo garage.

The tram car was proceeding North at a considerable rate of speed, according to witnesses, and the motor truck, travelling South at a point about two hundred yards North of Jukong Road, was unable to get out of the way, partly owing to street repairing at that point. The impact was so great that the tram car was thrown off the track and almost onto the footpath at the side of the road, while the truck was badly smashed up in front. No one was injured.

Witnesses Bare Details Of Insurance Enterprise Held To Be Fraudulent

Working Of World Insurance Underwriters And German-American Companies Described At Trial Of Spence And Chalmers

Details of the manner in which A. M. Spence and G. Y. Chalmers conducted an insurance business which the police contend was wholly fraudulent and was engineered in the names of two companies that do not exist were told yesterday by a number of witnesses at the second day of the trial of Spence and Chalmers who are facing charges of conspiracy before Judge Peter Grain in the British Supreme Court.

Mr. A. G. Mossop, acting Crown Advocate is conducting the prosecution and Mr. P. W. Priestwood is appearing for Chalmers while Spence is conducting his own defense.

The compradore who was employed to act for the two insurance companies, styled the World Underwriters Insurance Company and the German-American Fire and Marine Insurance Company, was the first witness called yesterday.

He said that he paid a compradore order of $1,000 made in favor of Wallace. In the month of May he advanced $800 and in June $2,120.27 and in July $103. Altogether he advanced $5,000 odd. He also paid on compradore orders signed by Chalmers.

HE SUPPLIED CASH

The agreement that he signed on April 5th called for Tls. 5,000 advance. The reason why he advanced the $5,000 was he relied on the promise that he would be repaid at the end of the month. When he declined to pay these compradore orders, Wallace protested, saying that the money would be paid back at the end of the month. On July 11 Spence sent witness a letter stating that the office staff and business would have to be suspended until the "reappearance of Wallace."

At that time Wallace was under arrest. Chalmers asked witness to pay him a few thousand dollars to bail Wallace out. Accordingly, witness paid $500 to Chalmers and Chalmers handed it to Spence. This money was never returned. This amount was not included in the $5,000 account. He did not know the difference between loans to persons and loans to companies.

Whom did you consider during the term of your engagement as the person who represented the Insurance companies?

I looked to Chalmers who signed the agreement and also Wallace, who was the manager.

How did you regard Spence?—At first Spence did not come to the office much.

After Wallace went to Hankow, Spence came to the office and signed for Wallace.

There were some compradore orders that you refused to pay?

I cannot remember.

These compradore orders that you refused to pay were one for $255 signed by Wallace for stationery and the other for $57 by Chalmers for stationery as well?

If they are not included in the list I prepared them they must have been refused.

Cross examined by Mr. Priestwood, the compradore said he commenced his duties just after the office premises were painted. He first saw Wallace at the end of April or the beginning of May. A few days after he joined Chalmers told him that Wallace would be in charge of the fire insurance department.

Did anything come to your knowledge about a change of compradoreship?

I heard that unless I was prepared to advance money a new

TYPHOON VICTIMS' NEED IS GREAT, SAYS U. S. CONSUL

Letter From Swatow Received By Consul General Here

The first reply to repeated inquiries directed to Swatow by the American Red Cross China Central Committee here regarding the form of relief desired for the typhoon victims was received yesterday in the form of a letter sent by the American Consul at Swatow to the Consul-General at Hongkong and retransmitted to Shanghai.

The letter gave little in the way of definite information to go on but it indicated that the need was great and stated that a careful survey of the storm-swept district was being made and as soon as the results were available the extent of assistance required would be made known to the Consul-General here. The letter, dated August 17, stated that the immediate need in Swatow itself was being met by contributions made by local merchants and the Hongkong Government, the British Chamber of Commerce and other organisations in Hongkong. The authorities were distributing rice and money to the worst affected districts, reports from which showed the need to be great.

Subscriptions to the Swatow relief fund are still being received by the Red Cross Committee here, the fund now on hand being over $6,000. All desiring to make contributions should send them to Dr. W. W. Peter, American Red Cross China Central Committee, 4 Quinsan Gardens.

ERA OF THE SWORD ENDS, PEN WILL NOW RULE, SUN TELLS JOURNALISTS HERE

Constitutionalist Leader, At Dinner To Chinese Press Men, Declares Public Opinion Will Be Biggest Factor In Building True Republic

UNIFICATION NOW UP TO PEOPLE

Tyranny And Militarism Have Failed, Host Points Out, And Sentiments Of The Populace Will Force Warlords To Keep Word

With the agreement on the part of Northern militarists to support constitutionalism, the period of struggle for democracy in China by force has passed into history. China is at the turning point today and from now on the struggle for Republicanism must be carried on through the weight of public opinion.

This summarises an eloquent address made by Dr. Sun Yat-sen, China's first provisional president and father of Republicanism in the Far East, at a dinner given by him to two score leading Chinese journalists at his residence in Rue Moliere last night.

Shortly after six o'clock, members of the local Chinese newspaperdom filed into the modest residence of the Constitutional leader, who, in his usual fine spirit, greeted them individually and chatted with many of them informally. He assisted in the reception of his guests by Mr. Quo Tai-chi, the Southern leader, and Mr. Zau Zoong-hui, editor of the Republican Daily News.

IS GIVEN OVATION

An ovation was given to Dr. Sun when he rose to speak after the party had partaken of an elaborate dinner. Dr. Sun spoke without oratorical or rhetorical effort. He expressed gratification towards the Chinese press in Shanghai for their support of the Constitutional cause in the Southwest, for which he and his colleagues had fought for the last six years.

"After struggling for Constitutionalism for the last six years, during which much blood was shed and many lives were sacrificed, the militarists up North have at last come to the realisation that they must support this cause. They realise that to place the nation on a firm basis, law and order must reign and the Legislature must perform its functions freely, without any outside interference.

"Whether they are sincere as to what they profess or not, we are not concerned at present. Because if they are sincere, and we fail to do our own duty, the nation will be just as chaotic and lawless as it has been for the last decade. On the other hand, if they are not sincere, we, the people, the press, the genuine public opinion, will prevent them from going back on their own assertions.

WAR NO LONGER NECESSARY

"Now that the militarists have pledged themselves to support the Republic, there is no longer necessity for warfare. No armed force is necessary to effect our aspiration for national reunification, for today the sword should be laid away and the pen must be given free play. The self-determination of the military leaders makes it unnecessary to resort to arms to dictate the terms of unification, but the entire responsibility for a permanent unification is now laid upon the shoulders of the public which must see to it that the high ideals of Republicanism are carried out here in China so that the foundation of the country will be reinforced with strong principles of democracy."

The speaker here pointed out how militarism has failed in China for the last ten years. Yuan Shih-k'ai was the strongest militarist that the Republic has ever produced. He believed that his military power could crush all militarists, but he forgot to calculate the force of public opinion and in the end he brought himself to ruin.

In discussing the form of government of China, Dr. Sun expressed the firm belief that the Republican form of Government has come to stay; no one hereafter will dare to advocate a change to the monarchical form even though some of the militarists today may still entertain this ambition. He illustrated his statement with citations from China's history. Despite the attempts by Napoleon I and Napoleon III, France has come back to Republicanism. With the progressive spirit of the Chinese people, it is not possible for the nation to go back to imperialism, he declared.

EMPHASISES RESPONSIBILITY

"We have had unification by tyranny and unification by militarism," continued Doctor Sun, "but from now on, we must realise that permanent unification must be effected through constitutionalism. To you, gentlemen of the press, is entrusted the responsibility of diffusing the true essence of constitutionalism among the great populace and of watching every move to be made by the militarists, officials and political leaders so that the true ideals of democracy may be carried out in China."

Mr. Wang Han-chi, managing editor of the Sin Wan Pao responded. Among those present were Dr. F. C. Tong, of the Shun Pao; Messrs. Y. D. Shen and K. T. Koo of the Eastern Times; Mr. Jabin Hsu of The China Press; Mr. J. T. Hsieh of the Shun Pao; Mr. Yue Kuo-ming and Mr. Feng Su-luan of the National Herald; Mr. Hu Ling of the Kuo Wen News Agency; Mr. Corinth Lee of the Shanghai Gazette; Mr. Chu-chang of the Republican Daily News; Mr. Hu Yin-to and Mr. Chang Chi-luan of the China Hua Hsin Pao; Mr. Sun Tung-yu of the Hsin Shun Pao; Mr. Chao of the Dah Tong News Bureau and Chow Shao-an of the China Times.

Verdict Of Acquittal Is Given In Moore Case

Judge C. S. Lobingier In Written Ruling Finds Evidence Insufficient To Convict

Mr. P. R. Moore, commission broker with offices at 15 Nanking Road, was acquited of charges of adultery in a written judgment rendered yesterday by Judge Charles S. Lobingier of the United States Court for China. Mr. Moore was charged with having committed adultery with Mrs. Harriet Howard Swinehart, wife of Mr. Dudley E. Swinehart, at Bickerton's Hotel on April 23.

In giving judgment Judge Lobingier explained that adultery may be proved by circumstantial evidence and circumstances affecting the relations of the parties before and after the specific acts charged are admissable, but such circumstances "should be so cogent as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt." In his judgment he wrote that the evidence had been "reviewed and found insufficient to justify conviction." Mr. Moore was defended by Mr. F. J. Schuhl. The prosecution was conducted by United States District Attorney Leonard G. Husar.

Judge Lobingier's judgment is as follows:

JUDGMENT IN FULL

The information herein charges that the defendant "did commit the crime of adultery in that the said P. R. Moore on April 23, 1922, visited the room of Harriet Howard Swinehart, the wife of one Dudley E. Swinehart and while in the room of the said Harriet Howard Swinehart did commit adultery with the said Harriet Howard Swinehart."

A considerable amount of evidence was introduced by both sides affecting the conduct and relations of all the parties here named, both prior and subsequent to the date specified. This was admitted in accordance with a well known rule that proof of this particular offense need not be direct; it may be circumstantial and the circumstances bearing upon the whole situation may rightfully be considered. But it is also the rule that "the circumstances must be such as will lead the guarded discretion of a reasonable man to the conclusion that the offense has been committed, and should be so cogent as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt. If the facts shown can be reconciled with innocence, they are insufficient to sustain a conviction."

REVIEWS DETAILS

With this rule in mind we may proceed to weigh the evidence regarding the specific act charged, considering the prior and subsequent circumstances only as aiding us in determining the preponderance of the evidence. It may however be observed in passing that there is no claim of any inherently improper act save that charged in the Information and the first and perhaps leading witness for the prosecution concedes that in all he saw there was nothing bad in itself."

The wife mentioned in the Information had separated from her husband some weeks before the date specified. As to the cause of the separation there is a sharp conflict in the testimony. She says that her husband drove her away after repeated acts of cruelty while he declares that she left of her own accord. Whatever may be the truth on this point it is undisputed that she and the defendant had formed a corporation more than six weeks previous to the date in question for carrying on the business of making and exporting lingerie. April 23 was on Sunday and both testify that she telephoned the defendant to meet her on that day in order to examine patterns in connection with their business and that when defendant stated that he was making computations in connection with a lumber business in which he was also interested she offered to assist him; that she was then living at the Bickerton Hotel in Shanghai and that defendant went out there about three o'clock in the afternoon; that they spent their time in examining the patterns and in making the computations until after six p.m., meanwhile having four o'clock tea, when the husband and another foreigner accompanied by some Chinese boys came to the door and sought admission.

DOOR NOT LOCKED

There is no evidence that the door was locked prior to the approach of these parties. The wife testifies that it was not and that there was no key but that, hearing the approach and suspecting that her husband was pursuing her, she locked the door for the first time by means of a pencil inserted in the catch. In this she is corroborated by one of the hotel servants who testifies that he came in about five o'clock to make a fire and that the door was not locked and there was no key. There was no artificial light other than this fire but the hour was before sunset.

Not being admitted after knocking the complaining witness forced the door, apparently with little difficulty, and found his wife standing up fully dressed and the accused, also upright, some distance away. The testimony of the complaining witness and of the two called by him differs from that offered by the defendant chiefly in respect to the appearance of the two persons found in the room and the condition of the bed. The complaining witness declares that his wife's hair was disarranged, the Greek bartender who was with him says that "it was not well combed," while the Chinese witness called by the prosecution says nothing on this point. On the other hand the wife testified that her hair was in proper condition and in this she is fully corroborated by one of the hotel servants. Again the complaining witness says that defendant was holding up his trousers, the Greek bartender says that they were down when defendant rose after falling on his knees when the visitors entered and the Chinese witness merely says that they were not properly fastened.

ALLEGED FRAME-UP

The accused and the wife testify that the former was fully dressed when the visitors entered and that it was one of them who seized the defendant and loosened his trousers. The two hotel servants corroborate them except in stating that the accused wore a vest (waistcoat) instead of a coat, but there was a fire in the room and the accused, according to the undisputed testimony, had been engaged in writing and figuring. Finally the prosecution's witnesses testify that the bed was rumpled while the accused and the wife say that it was merely littered with patterns and papers which they had been using and that the disarrangement occurred after the outside parties had entered. In this also they are corroborated by the hotel servants. The complaining witness claims to have seen his wife's underwear on the bed, no other witness corroborates him in this and the accused and the wife contradict him.

In such a conflict of testimony the credibility of the witnesses becomes doubly important. The complaining witness testified very earnestly but with an evidently intense feeling against his wife as well as the accused. His testimony would be more convincing were it not for a letter which he wrote to his wife's mother some three weeks after the event in controversy in which, referring to the wife and the accused, he said:

"I discovered them in bed in a hotel here, and the man is now in jail on charge of aquitery, (sic) and will soon be indicted for white slavery and larceny." (Ex. 2)

This brief sentence contains no less than three incorrect statements. The wife and the accused were not "discovered in bed" but as we have seen, according to the testimony of the complaining witness himself, they were discovered standing upright a considerable distance apart. The accused was not only not "in jail" at the time the letter was written (May 11) but was not there at any time having given bail immediately upon his arrest and there is no hint of any attempt to charge him with "white slavery and larceny."

The prosecution's chief corroborating witness is, as we have seen, a Greek bartender who declined to answer two proper questions on the ground that his answers "would incriminate" him and who states that the accused had once brought a case against him in the Mixed Court. The only other corroboration comes from a paid Chinese employe of a detective agency known as the "Oriental Secret Service" and we doubt if standing alone and uncontradicted, the prosecution's evidence equals that of numerous cases where verdicts were directed in favor of parties charged with this same offense, the evidence being considered insufficient to go to the jury. For the maximum penalty in this case is three years of imprisonment; and a woman's honor no less than a man's liberty is involved.

But as we have seen the prosecution's witnesses are not uncontradicted. On the contrary, on every disputed point, they are met by other witnesses who, neither in number nor in credibility, suffer by comparison. Indeed the least interested witnesses to the occurrence of April 23 appear to be the hotel servants who, as we have seen, almost uniformly corroborate the accused. A strong corroborating circumstance is also found in the testimony of the wife's physician that her physical condition at the time was such as to render any improper relations between her and the accused highly improbable. In the face of all this we certainly could not find the circumstantial evidence to be so cogent as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis except that of guilt.

The accused is acquitted with costs de officio.

Was the payment of Tls. 250 advanced to Chalmers guaranteed by Chalmers' compradore in the mercantile business?

I do not know.

Re-examined by Mr. Mossop, the compradore said that he heard there was another compradore who was agreeable to pay more than witness. This he heard from outside. Later on, witness actually learned that this report was correct from the man who wanted to become compradore.

A woman riesha manufacturer on East Yalu Road testified that she had taken out a policy for Tls. 1,000 on her business in the World Underwriters Company and had paid $16 in premiums. The policy was issued on May 22, she said, and was signed by Wallace.

A Chinese insurance clerk was called and testified that he had taken out a policy for Tls. 1,000 with the German-American company through the compradore and had paid in Tls. 6.25 less 15 percent. A Chinese exporter testified he had taken out two policies for Tls. 6,000 for himself and friends. Both were signed by Spence, he said.

HUSAR IS WITNESS

United States District Attorney Leonard G. Husar was next called to the stand and testified that he had received a communcation from United States Consul-General E. S. Cunningham requesting him to investigate the two companies as they claimed to be American companies.

Mr. Husar said he saw Spence on June 14 after he had written him regarding the German-American company. Continuing Mr. Husar said: "I asked Spence whether he was the authorised agent of the insurance companies and whether they were doing business here. He said he was doing business and that he had the power of attorney. I then asked him whether he had a certified copy of the articles of incorporation and he told me he had them in his office.

"I then requested him to bring them to my office and he promised to bring them to me the next morning. He did not come as he promised. A week later I received a letter from Spence stating that he had failed to find the articles of incorporation and saying that he had cabled the head office informing them that the American Consulate desired the information. Spence in his letter also said that he was in communication with the Secretary of the American Chamber of Commerce regarding the affairs of the company.

"The letter was signed by Spence as manager of the World Underwriters company. I received with this letter copies of the cablegrams together with the translations. The cabelgram ran: 'It is very important to forward us immediately certified copies of the articles of incorporation. Consulate investigating. Urgent reply to this copy. It was dated June 4, 1921.'

Did Spence tell you his nationality? I asked him and he said he was British.

At that interview did he make any mention about a man named Chalmers?

He did. He spoke of him and he also mentioned the name of Wallace.

Did you take further steps after that letter?

No, I waited. The Consulate wired to Washington concerning the genuiness of the companies I wrote Mr. Cunningham telling him what I had done and the decision that I had reached. I had decided the companies were false.

Mr. Husar was not cross-examined.

WYLIE TESTIFIES

Mr. Herbert Wylie, representing the American Foreign Fire Association of New York in Shanghai was next called and testified as to the necessary procedure for an insurance company to be formed in the United States.

WALLACE TESTIFIES

Walter George Wallace was the next witness. He said he met Chalmers in Manila in 1919 and came to Shanghai at the end of that year. Witness obtained employment in February of 1920 in the insurance department of Probst, Hanbury and Company. When he met Chalmers, the latter told him he was representing Brooke and Company, which had United States Shipping Board vessels. In 1920 Chalmers was the manager of the North China Trading Company. Witness said he lost his employment with Probst, Hanbury and Company in 1920. He then went to Chalmers and secured a job at Vladivostok. At the end of December, last year, he went to Tientsin on Chalmers' instructions, and represented the North China Tradinx Company there. He came to Shanghai in March as the company closed its business.

Witness met Chalmers, Bowe, Spence and Chase in Shanghai.

Chalmers later offered him a position as manager of the Celestial Mercantile Company and also told him of the two insurance companies, showing witness the insurance companies' stationery.

Witness continued Chalmers told him the head offices of the companies were in the United States. Witness accepted a position as an agent at a salary of Taels 250 plus 10 percent and travelling expenses. Chalmers did most of the talking, he said but added that he understood Spence was just as much interested.

"About May 16 Chalmers gave me a note of appointment," witness continued. "In the meantime he said he was communicating with Chapman at Chefoo. I have lost the original. The letter of appointment stated that W. G. Wallace is hereby appointed general manager of the World Underwriters' Insurance Company of New Jersey and hereby takes all responsibility for the indebtedness of same.' By 'Indebtedness' I understood indebtedness to the compradore. Later on Chalmers told me he got a letter from Chapman at Chefoo. He told me that Chapman would not give me a power of attorney as he did not know me.

ASKS FOR NOTE

"I then asked for the return of the note that I signed in which I undertook to be responsible for the indebtedness of the company. Chalmers said I should not mind, but carry on. I said I had taken the responsibility. He said he did not see what responsibility I had incurred as it was he that signed the contract with the compradore. Chalmers said he would look for the document I signed. I searched for the original document in my house but could not find it."

Witness then told of a trip to Hangchow with Chalmers, Dzung and the compradore to look up possibilities and establish agencies.

"Chalmers asked me to make out a receipt for Tls. 500. That was a receipt for money paid by the compradore to Chalmers. The compradore suggested that as the two companies were new it was absolutely necessary that an advertisement be inserted in the papers. The compradore suggested that the name of Chalmers be put under the advertisements but Chalmers objected and said that they should appear under the 'Celestial Mercantile Company' with 'W. G. Wallace' as manager. The compradore asked what capital to mention in the advertisement as being possessed by the two insurance companies and Chalmers said a million dollars gold each.

"Chalmers asked me to write another letter to the compradore asking him to furnish additional security of Tls. 1,500, which the compradore declined to pay.

"After I came back from Nanking the latter part of May the compradore handed me $1,000 and I turned it over to Chalmers. For all these trips made the compradore paid the travelling expenses.

INSTINCT vs. INTELLIGENCE

Why aren't all humans as wise as some animals? During the season of plenty these make provision for the wants of the winter when they no longer can secure food.

The bear fattens himself for his period of hibernation; the bee hoards honey; the squirrel stores away a supply of nuts.

What animals do through instinct—men should do through intelligence and will-power.

Berlin Pessimistic Over Reparations

(Reuter's Service)

London, August 23.—Reuter's Berlin correspondent reports that there is nothing to be said at present with regard to the discussions between the delegates of the Reparations Commission and the German Ministers.

The Berlin correspondents of the French newspapers are pessimistic and mention a statement, described as semi-official, that Dr. Hermes told Sir John Bradbury and M. Mauclere that the German Government could not entertain the idea of granting the guarantees demanded by France, nor consent to handing over the gold reserve of the Reichsbank on deposit.

They assert that M. Mauclere is dissatisfied with the progress of the negotiations and does not share the optimism of Sir John Bradbury, who wished to induce the German Government to offer guarantees other than those demanded by France but the Germans are merely repeating their previous proposals.

NO MEDICINE AS GOOD FOR LITTLE ONES

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. The first few doses make her realize there is nothing to equal them in making baby well and keeping him well. Concerning them Mrs. C. E. Stilwell, Winthrope, Sask, Canada, writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past ten years and have found them so good for my little ones that I always keep a vial in the house." Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 60 cents per vial post free from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., 96 Szechuen Road, Shanghai.

A Coffee Discovery

According to an Arabian legend, Hadji Omar, a pious Dervish, was outlawed from Mocha in the year 1285. When almost dying of hunger in the wilderness, he roasted some of the small round berries he found growing wild in the thickets. A few of the roasted berries accidentally fell into his drinking water, and thus coffee was discovered.

You Find It Here

Many people in this town and vicinity have discovered that they can get the best coffee at our store, the kind that pleases their taste and suits their pocketbooks. Call or telephone. We want to show you.

"The Verdict of the Great Public" has again been given in our favour. It is the only verdict we are concerned about. Our Sales this year have increased at top speed, due to our downright and open policy in the preparation of our making them the most popular on the market. Bluff will not work with the Public these times, so let any doubting Thomas' come down here to have it proved to them.

This result has been the more gratifying as there apparently has been an organised conspiracy to deprive us of it. The expected slump did not materialise.

It is one of the "Penalties of Success."

We thank the Public for their continued support and apologise if there have been any delays at the height of the season.

Meiji-Shanghai To Play Off Three-Game Series Tomorrow And Monday

Failure To Meet Ft. Mills In Final Game Not To Stop Series With Locals

Meiji University and Shanghai play the second game of their series tomorrow afternoon commencing at 3:30 o'clock, and the third game on Monday at 4:30 p.m. The Sunday game has not yet been decided upon though it is likely that the U.S.S. Buffalo will meet a team composed of men from the Isabel filled out with other local players.

Meiji failed to fill its scheduled date yesterday afternoon against the Fort Mills nine, which has already beaten the Japanese two games straight. The collegians first offered the reason that they had already lost the series so that there was no use in playing further games. It was amended later however that their star battery and three others of their team were ill and unable to take the field. The fact remains however that the Japanese failed to fill their scheduled date against the visiting champions of the Philippines, in spite of the fact that they were advertised to play and the Shanghai public expected to witness the game.

The Meiji nine however will play Shanghai Saturday and Monday to complete their schedule of three games, of which the Japanese have won the one already played. Watanabe will probably work on both days for the visitors. Griffith, the strike out artist, will pitch on Saturday for Shanghai with John Scott working on Monday.

A Japanese was charged at the Japanese Court on Friday last with fraudulently selling spurious liquor purporting to have been manufactured by Messrs. John Walker & Sons. He was committed for trial to a higher court.

In the interests of the public we describe below the difference between the genuine and spurious, and wish to state that there is no difficulty whatever in detecting the fraud. The original John Walker & Sons' bottles and labels have been used for bottling the spurious article, but the cork and the capsule, neither of which can be imitated in China, are entirely different.

Cotton Industry Here Encountering Dull Times Is Report At Meeting

General Outline Of Conditions Is Presented In Speech Of Chairman Of Shanghai Cotton Manufacturing Company

Shanghai's cotton manufacturing industry is passing through a period of depression and restricted profits and is feeling the effect of general labor disturbance, according to views set forth yesterday at the second annual meeting of the Shanghai Cotton Manufacturing Company in the speech of Chairman of the Company, Mr. Nodaira.

Directors who attended the meeting at which 49,035 shares were represented were Messrs. John Prentice, Takahashi, S. Ikeda, Harry Morriss, W. J. N. Dyer, K. Otani and H. Robinson. Three resolutions that were adopted were as follows:

That the business report, for the second year, balance sheet, general inventory, assets and profit and loss account as presented for the year ending June 30 be approved. This was moved by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. Prentice.

That the suggested appropriation of the balance at the credit of the profit and loss account as presented be passed. This was also moved by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. Prentice.

That Messrs. Edwin Sheldon Wilkinson and Senji Ido be appointed auditors. This was moved by Mr. Takahashi and seconded by Mr. Ikeda.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS

The address of the Chairman was as follows:

"Gentlemen: The report and accounts for the year ended June 30, 1922, having been in your hand for some days, with your permission, I will take them as read.

"The result of the year's working has, in our opinion, been on the whole satisfactory, though not as bright as the two preceding years:

"The early part of the year under review was as good as could be wished for, but the nearer approach to the close of the year, the worse the market became. The margin of profit was reduced to almost a minimum, and had it not been the case with mills of superior productive power, the balance at credit of the profit and loss a/c. would have been much smaller. The opening of the new year, likewise, does not warrant an optimistic view, and I earnestly hope that the general condition of the market may soon improve and so enable our mills to continue to be run without restricting their output.

"Buildings, machinery, equipment in your mills have received very careful attention and apart from sundry additions and improvements were made, the sum as much as Tls. 226,319.40 were spent for their renewal and repair, which amount, as usual, was charged direct to the working account.

"The machinery and plants at both spinning and weaving mills, were well looked after and with additional installment of preparatory machinery etc., their condition is in excellent order.

"In order to meet the ever-increasing pay roll for labor, the management are assiduously endeavoring to reduce other items in production cost, and with sundry up-to-date modern equipment such as water plants etc., and with other improvements of conveyance of coal and other matters, satisfactory results are anticipated.

"Some of the old buildings are, however, not up to the mark as reported before, but after having been temporarily repaired, they may be able to stand use for a further period.

"As I informed you at the last meeting and also as stated in the report, your directors, after careful consideration, have decided to have a new additional weaving mill with capacity of 983 looms within No. 2 Mill compound at an approximate cost of Tls. 780,000.00.

"Complete machinery was ordered and some has already arrived and the work of building is progressing favorably. The looms for this new mill are of the most improved type especially suitable for Chinese sheeting and expected to yield much better results than the ones at present in use. The supply of power will be made by the S.M.C.

"The question of labor, as we stated before, is getting to be one of the most difficult problems, and is receiving the serious attention of the management.

"The waves of class war which have been spreading rapidly all over the world, have not spared this old peace-loving nation, and here in Shanghai, those connected with various industries have equally suffered and hardly any have escaped from the menace.

"I think, it is time to give most careful and farsighted consideration, to devising ways and means to reduce this kind of trouble to the minimum.

"For the reason stated in the report and for the purpose of relieving shortage of housing accommodation among our workmen, whose welfare should not be lost sight of, your directors have acquired certain land within easy reach of the mills and have erected a number of houses, the result of the enterprise, I am glad to say, is exceedingly good."

Chinese Physician Coming From U.S. To Work For Union

Dr. Don G. Lew, one of the first Chinese to enter the Seattle public schools, will soon come to China to become associated with the Peking Union Medical College, according to the Seattle Daily Times. The Seattle paper writes of Dr. Lew in the August 3 issue as follows:

Dr. Don G. Lew, son of the late Lew King, for forty-five years well known merchant of this city is visiting relatives here on his way to Peking, where he will become a member of the surgical staff of the Peking Union Medical Hospital, the Rockefeller Foundation of China.

Dr. Lew and his four brothers and sisters were the first Chines children to enter the Seattle schools. He is a graduate of Broadway High School and the University of Washington, where he received his B. S. degree in 1915. In 1919 he finished his medical course at the University of Pennsylvania and passed the tests of the National Board of Examiners in 1920. He served as tuberculosis specialist in the United States Veterans' Bureau, Philadelphia, the first Chinese thus employed by the government.

At the University of Washington he was instructor of boxing in 1915 and at the University of Pennsylvania, as the best feather-weight boxer in his school, he was captain of the boxing team in his senior year. Dr. Lew believes that one of his principal activities in his new field, must be to preach the gospel of athletics.

"The average student in China," he said yesterday, "is physically weak, but the introduction of athletics and western health ideas during the last ten years, has started a tremendous program of physical education, in which I hope to have some part."

Dr. Don H. Palmer said today: "The Rockefeller Foundation at Peking is a Class A medical institution, on a par with the finest in this country and destined to become one of the great clinical centers of the world. Lew is a fine example of the Chinese student educated in this country, and Seattle has reason to be proud of him."

Coal Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows in their report on the coal market:

Japan Coal:—There has been no business done on this market during the past fortnight, as we predicted in our last issue and we do not see much possibility of the market reviving until the Autumn.

Fushun Coal:—This market has been rather active recently and quite a good demand has set in although no actual business has been concluded as yet.

Fuchung Anthracite:—The local market has been rather quiet but the inquiries from overseas continue and negotiations are proceeding.

Kaiping Coal:—Although shipments have been resumed from Chinwangtao, arrivals are not yet normal.

Prices remain firm and there is still a shortage of stocks.

Freight Market

In their fortnightly report on the freight market, Messrs. Wheelock and Company state:

The export trade from China continues as dull as ever except for a certain amount of tea which is being shipped to Europe and to America.

To United Kingdom and Continent:—The China Home-ward Conference announces a reduction in freight of approximately 25 percent on cereals and oil on the basis of beans from Shanghai at 33/—per ton of 20 cwt. to take effect from the 22nd inst.

Coastwise:—This market has continued quiet during the past fortnight as the coasting trade is still suffering from the effects of the disaster at Swatow;—the rice crop at Wuhu is reported to be exceedingly good and promises well for exports to the South in due course.

Chinese Eastern Bandits Escape

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, August 21.—The majority of the mutineers who looted Buhedu station on the Chinese Eastern Railway have apparently made good their escape, and their present whereabouts is unknown.

A party of 400 who fled toward Sinanchin are still being pursued but all that is known of the others is that they are not within 300 li of Buhedu.

Two lives were lost in the outrage, the victims being a Russian and a Chinese. The property damage is placed at $600,000.

Spanish War Widows Get Pension Boost

(China Press Service)

Washington, August 22.—The Senate has passed with amendments the House bill granting an increase in pensions to the widows, dependent children and parents of veterans of the war with Spain, the Philippine insurrection and the Chinese Boxer rebellion. No increase is given the veterans, but for the widows and dependent parents of the veterans, the new rate of pension will be $20 a month instead of $12; while for children, the pension will be $4 per month instead of $2.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

August 24, 1922

Spot and Forward Bar Silver were each unchanged in London yesterday as well as in New York. The London-New York cross rate declined to 447½ The only change in our Official quotation here today was a rise in the Franc rate to 975.

Our market opened firm this morning and while at times it eased off slightly, was steady to firm throughout the day. Shortly after the opening speculators sold Sterling at 3s. 5⅞d. and Gold Dollars at 77⅜. Banks however generally were buyers at these rates, particularly of Gold Dollars. Rates therefore eased off slightly, business in Sterling being done as low as [illegible] 7/16d. and in Gold Dollars at 77½.

Banks, however, were generally good sellers at these rates and the market steadied up again until in the afternoon a fair amount of business in Sterling was again done at 3s. 5⅞d. and in Gold Dollars at 77⅝. As high as 3s. 5 9/16d. in Sterling and 77¾ in Gold Dollars were done in the afternoon but banks generally were buyers at these rates. The market closed steady.

Banks were quoting 3s. 6 1/16 d. for Sterling Bills, 79 for Gold Dollar Bills and 1,025 for Franc Bills, although they were not anxious buyers of Franc Bills unless against sales.

There was nothing doing in the London silver market yesterday and the market there as well as in New York is reported steady.

Exchange Market

In their weekly report on the exchange market, Messrs. Maitland, Fearon and Brand write as follows:

Exchange:—The price of silver in London, after minor fluctuations is ¼d. lower than this day last week, the latest quotation being 34¾ both ready and forward. Locally the market continues quiet, exports still remaining dull and the demand for gold remittance being negligible. The chief feature of the week has been the almost complete liquidation of speculators overbought sterling position, under this influence the market became disturbed for a day or two, and as high as 3s. 5⅝d. was offering for T.T. on London; however, rates soon receded on the succeeding inactivity.

The official rate at the close is 3s. 5d. with ⅛d. above offering, the tone being generally steady.

Our stocks of silver are reported as follows:

Sycee and Bar Silver Tls. 40,749,000, an increase of Tls. 959,000.

Chinese and Mexican Dollars $34,260,000, a decrease of $400,000.

Estimated value Tls. 65,416,000 as against Tls. 46,360,000 held at this time last year.

Rubber Prices

Messrs. R. N. Truman and Company have received the following telegram from their Singapore Agents in connection with the auctions held there on Wednesday, August 23,

No. 1 Crepe $0.24 per pound equivalent to 0s. 6¾ d. ex ware-house Singapore.

The Rising Tide Of Religion

(Literary Digest)

THE HOROSCOPE OF RELIGION for the whole of humanity will be cast by the North American continent, says Dr. Walter Laidlaw, who bases his forecast on the growth of religion as it expresses itself in the United States in 203 religious bodies, or denominations; in 227,487 religious organisations, and nearly 50,000,000 church members. Dr. Laidlaw, who is registrar of the Clergy Club of New York, and special agent of the United States Census Bureau, writes in the New York Times that the church membership in the United States is increasing faster than the population of the nation, and that the 50,000,000 church members are spending yearly upward of $300,000,000 in religious work at home and abroad, with an "affectionate investment" in church property of nearly two billions of dollars. If it survives and thrives then, in the free air of the democracies north and south of the Canadian border, says Dr. Laidlaw, "religion is a plant that will never disappear from the planet. . . . Uncoerced, a constantly increasing proportion of the population is enlisting under the banner of the Kingdom of God." The State itself is responsible for this statement, for, he says:

"Our nation is not content with tabulating its cotton-gins, its telephones and street railways; it tabulates its churches and their ministries. It gives them all an opportunity, decennially, to render an account of their equipment, adherence, and activity inside and outside the nation, and in 1916 it tabulated, from Maine to Mexico, by States, by religious communions, by cities and by counties, an investment of $1,976,609,582 in the church property of America. The debt on the whole was less than 10 per cent.

"A nation that has put almost $2,000,000,000 of free-will offerings on the altar to erect its institutions of religious teaching and ministry cannot be called materialistic. In 1916 alone America expended $328,809,999 for religious work at home and abroad through its 227,487 religious organisations. Religion is not a negligible element in America, even in market terms, and it must be conceded by the most skeptical that the American people believe in its social utility.

"In 1906, when the nation numbered 86,646,370 people, the membership of religious bodies was 35,068,058, or 40.4 percent. On December 31, 1916, the nation numbered 101,464,014 people, and the membership of religious bodies had risen to 41,926,854, or 41.3 percent. The membership of religious bodies on December 31, 1921, was 46,059,500, an increase of 4,132,646 in five years. The nation at the same date, at the rate of increase of the census period 1910 to 1920, numbered 107,132,678 persons. The membership of religious bodies as nearly as can be calculated was over 43 percent."

The Mormons, "other religious" bodies and the Eastern Catholics aggregate only a little over a million of the 42,000,000 church members of the nation in 1916, says the writer, remarking that it should be noted that the increase of the Eastern group, as shown in the table below, which was 90.1 percent in the period from 1906 to 1916, was so great that it closely approaches the Jewish membership figures. The Jewish percentage is not computed, because, we are told, the basis of reporting in the case of many of the Jewish synagogues is not individual, or at least was not in 1906. Many synagogues which reported in terms of families in 1906 seem to have reported in terms of individuals in 1916, and "since the Jews of the nation increased their religious organisations from 1,769 in 1906 to 1,901 in 1916, or hardly 8 percent, it is not credible that their individual membership increased 250 percent, as the face of the Jewish membership figures would imply." As divided into groups, the comparative membership in 1906 and 1916, with gains and losses and growth, percentage, was as follows:

	1906	1916	Gain	Per centage
Nation's population	86,646,370	101,464,014	14,717,644	17.1
Latter Day Saints	256,647	462,329	205,682	80.1
Other religions	44,217	45,959	1,742	3.9
Jewish	101,457	164,988	256,678	90.1
Eastern Catholic	164,988	313,626	148,638	90.1
Roman Catholic	14,810,755	15,721,895	1,511,060	10.6
Protestant	20,290,014	26,035,990	4,735,976	22.4
	35,068,058	41,926,854	6,858,796	19.5

From 1906 to 1916 the growth of the nation was 17.1 percent, and in the above list the Roman Catholic and "other religious" groups are the only two whose percentage of increase fell below the population increase of the nation. The Roman Catholic Church, which includes in its membership figures all baptised infants and bases its statistic "not on an actual count of members but on a computation made by the diocese chancellors from the recorded baptisms of each year as returned from each parish," increased only 10.6, whereas, says the writer, the Protestant churches practising infant baptism grew in the same decennium 23 percent, and the adult baptism Protestant churches grew 28.2 percent—much of it from the increase of colored congregations, although by no means all of the negro religious bodies showed growth in the decade.

"The fact, however, that the religious group of America showing the greatest percentage of increase from 1906 to 1916 was a group practising only adult baptism, while the Roman Catholic Church, including all baptised infants in its membership, showed the smallest percentage increase among the Christian bodies listed in the group classification, proves that America, utilising her mature judgment to evaluate religion, values it so highly that it recruits its adherents more rapidly than the nation as a whole increases its population roll.

"Such testimony, in a land which severs Church and State, is a good augury for the ultimate extension of religion to every area of the planet."

"BEGGARS AND SPOOFERS"

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir,—Will you allow me to protest against the tenets of the article "London beggars has many spoofers" which appeared in your columns of August 20 last, subscribed by the Chung Mei News Agency and supposedly emanating from London on July 20. This article, so obviously the production of a hair-brained individual who lives by the manufacture of any story acceptable to any news agency of the Chung Mei type, is the most gullible rot that has appeared in any newspaper, exuding as it does unadulterated slush—no other word quite fits what I mean—to which every Londoner, and those who know London, will take a very strong exception. The writer who produced this piffle has obviously never heard of any other cities than London, New York and Paris. If The Chung Mei Agency is, as I presume, a Chinese concern the utter absurdity of coupling "beggars" and "China" is so very palpable as to need no comment beyond a sharp reminder to Chung Mei that it has a herculean task in removing the colossal mote from its own eye and it would be well advised to devote whatever energy it might possess to this important work first. Yours faithfully,

Xono.

NEWTON AND EINSTEIN

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS.

Sir,—Our friend "S.S." seems quite peeved. Wonder if he can give the correct answers to the two simple questions I answered wrongly, in plain English please (not billingsgate).

He mentions Newton and gravitation; did not Newton publish the theory, and have not succeeding generations of thinkers developed the benefits. Perhaps many before Newton understood that such a law existed.

Einstein has published a theory: let us hope the generations to come will benefit by it as for relativity every navigator has used it since the first.

Wait a couple of hundred years, "S.S.," and if A. Conan Doyle is right you may have the pleasure of saying to me "I told you so."

Now I know what started me on the trail of scepticism, it was trying to imagine which foot the "Outsider in space," was standing on when he saw both the ship and the lighthouse from which the ship could not be seen.

Nosuch Fish.

EINSTEIN AND THE BILLIARD BALL

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Dear Sir,—In the article of Sunday's issue of your very esteemed paper about Einstein's theory of relativity you ask "Is the Einstein theory true?" answering at the same time: "Nobody knows. He doesn't know himself."

Being neither an astronomer nor a mathematician, nevertheless I should like to draw the attention of scientists to the following facts or possibilities, hoping that a consideration of them might more or less contribute to the explanation of the causes of the phenomenon in question. If light is matter, as claimed by Einstein, then it is subject to the same physical law according to which, for instance, the force and velocity of a deflected billiard ball are approximately equal to the force and velocity with which it had hit the rail of a billiard-table.

Now, with regard to the example concerning the train with the two mirrors, supposed the velocity of the train to be 1,000 miles in a second and the length of the train 186,000 miles, we have to remember that the velocity of light per second is 186,000 miles and that the train is in movement towards the searchlight, consequently the total force or velocity of the light with which the rear mirror is hit, will be 186,000 plus 1,000 = 187,000 miles in a second. With a velocity of these 187,000 miles per second the reflected light will dart ahead along the train and after one second will reach the fore mirror of the train, thus having made good the length of the train = 186,000 miles plus the inertitude or the distance run by the train in one second = 1,000 miles. Total 187,000 miles in one second, i.e. in the same time as would be necessary in the case if the train was at a standstill. Quod erat demonstrandum.

The light's own or proper velocity is augmented by the inertness or the velocity of the moving rear mirror. A proof that this is true we have when we consider that in case the reflected light had no velocity of its own, it still would have been advanced by the moving rear mirror 1,000 miles in the time of one second. Add to these 1,000 miles the light's own velocity per one second, and you will have the 187,000 miles.

It is true, the distance between the Earth and a planet can be several hundred or thousand times greater than 186,000 miles; on the other hand however the velocity of a revolving planet in its orbit will be up to hundred times or even several hundred times less than 1,000 miles in a second of time.

Another example: Supposing a planet moving in a direction from the sun or deviating from it, followed by the Earth which is moving in about the same direction with less velocity. The case will be a relative moving away from each other as the distance between the planet and the Earth gradually will become greater and greater. As the planet is not approaching the sun, but is deviating from it, the former will be hit by the sun's rays not with an augmented, but on the contrary, with a reduced force. Consequently the sun's reflected light will return from the plane towards the Earth with a reduced force and velocity and would arrive on the Earth delayed if meanwhile the latter had not made some progress towards the planet. This progress or reduction of distance may render an approximate compensation for the reduction of the velocity of the reflected light so that the latter may reach the Earth in about the same time as in the case if both planet and Earth were at a standstill.

A third example: The Earth is moving towards the sun followed by a planet with a greater velocity than that of the Earth. This is a case of a relative moving towards or approaching each other as the distance between the planet and the Earth becomes gradually less. The direction of the movement being towards the sun, the velocity of the reflected light augmented by that of the moving planet would induce an accelerated arrival of the reflected light on the Earth, if the latter was at a standstill. However the reflected light from the planet will arrive on the Earth in approximately due time because the Earth too had moved towards the sun, having thus augmented the distance which the reflected light has had to travel with its increased speed.

Certainly there will be cases and constellations of sun, planets and Earth to which the above examples cannot be referred. On the other hand the velocity of a reflected light may depend not only on the movements of the planet and the Earth, but—for instance—also on the angle of reflection. A different effect may have an acute angle of reflection, and another, effect an obtuse one. Yours very respectfully.

P. Schnore.

Russia's Far Eastern Fisheries A Critical Problem

BY LEO PASVOLSKY

Washington, July 22.—When Admiral Kato, as the new Prime Minister of Japan, announced recently the decision of his government to undertake immediately the withdrawal of the Japanese troops from Siberia, he was, no doubt, influenced in making this action so soon after his assumption of that high post by his experience here as the head of the Japanese delegation to the Washington conference. During his stay here, the new Prime Minister indicated on a number of occasions that he was generally in favor of such a policy on the part of his government. He had ample opportunity, besides, to observe what the general attitude in the United States is toward the whole question of the Japanese military operations in the Russian Far East. And since it is fair to assume that the Admiral, as one of the principal signatories to the treaties worked out by the Washington conference, expects to make a close rapprochement with the United States one of the bases of his foreign policy, there seems no doubt that so early an action in the Siberian matter has been in deference to the American feeling on the question.

The cable dispatches from Tokio indicate that the Kato Ministry is not prepared, however, to go beyond the position stated in the declaration read into the records of the Washington conference by Baron Shidehara in the name of the Kato delegation. In this declaration the Japanese government undertook, at the earliest opportunity, to withdraw its troops from the City of Vladivostok and from other portions of the Primorsk, or maritime province of Siberia, only. It is these troops that Premier Kato now promises to withdraw. Yet the really important phase of the situation lies in the Japanese occupation of the island of Sakhalin and of the mouth of the Amur River. The Japanese position in Washington and, apparently, Premier Kato's position today is that these portions of Siberia the Japanese are not prepared to evacuate at the present time.

READING OF STATEMENT

The conference disposed of that portion of its agenda which referred to Siberia by merely reading into its record two statements on the question. The first was an official declaration on the part of Japan, in which a solemn promise was made to evacuate eventually the Russian territory still occupied by Japanese troops, as well as to respect certain principles of Russian sovereignty and of international equality of economic opportunity on the territory of Siberia. The second statement was a declaration of the position held by the government of the United States on the subject of the Japanese occupation of portions of Siberia. There was nothing more specific or definite.

It was quite natural, therefore, that those who expected from the conference some sort of action on the Siberian question were sorely disappointed. It was no less natural, too, that the handling of this question in Washington came in at the time of the conference, and still comes in at the present time, for an abundant share of adverse criticism. In fact, it has assumed, in the general opinion of those interested in Far Eastern affairs, the aspect of the greatest failure of the Washington conference.

And yet it is scarcely fair to lay too much blame upon the statesmen who sat around the conference table in Washington—except, perhaps, for promising, in the agenda, as full a discussion of the Siberian question as of the Chinese. Such a promise was, quite obviously, unfulfillable. The Siberian question as well as the Chinese, rests primarily not upon an enunciation of principles of international action, but upon the actual application of these principles. And such an application is of necessity a matter for adjustment between the two countries concerned—in this case between Japan and Russia. Since Russia was not, and could not be, represented in Washington, such an adjustment was impossible. It must remain impossible until there is a recognised government in Russia, authoritatively competent to deal with the situation.

The one thing which the Washington conference did accomplish with regard to the Russian Far Eastern situation was to put Japan on record as to her intentions, and in this way to provide a basis upon which restored Russia—if she should be disposed to utilise it—may find it easier to conduct her eventual negotiations with Japan for the adjustment of the problems involved.

This adjustment will be most difficult at best. And possibly the most striking illustration of the difficulties which loom up in the future, as well as of those which confronted the Washington conference, in this regard, may be found in the problem which is concerned with the question of Japan's relations to the Russian Far Eastern fisheries.

CENTER OF THE STAGE

It is rather unfortunate that the center of the stage in the consideration of Far Eastern problems, so far as it concerns Russia, is still held by the fact of Japan's military occupation of portions of two Russian provinces on the Pacific Coast. To be sure, this fact is important enough, but the really significant element in the situation is that of Japan's economic penetration into Siberia, and none of the aspects of this element is more serious than that of the fisheries. This is especially so since Japan has taken important new steps since the conference with regard to her relations toward the Russian Far Eastern fisheries, and even more so because this particular question really involves a test of her intentions and promises as enunciated at the Washington conference.

It will remain for a future Russo-Japanese parley or, possibly, another international conference, to decide whether or not Japan has really been guilty of utilising the fact of her superior strength and Russia's temporary weakness to take an unfair advantage of the situation thus created. She is accused today in many quarters of doing precisely this. It seems a fairer thing to do, however, to leave conclusions to such future as can pass judgment upon them and act on the basis of this judgment. What one can do at the present time is to set down the story of the actual events and the salient features of the authoritative presentations of the case by both sides, as found in the official documents which happen to be available. That, in itself, seems eminently worth while.

Japan as a nation depends for her vital sustenance upon a fish-rice diet, in counter-distinction to a meat-grain diet, which constitutes the basis of the food supplies of Western nations. Fish, therefore, is an article of vital national necessity to Japan. And though, as an essentially maritime nation, Japan has at her disposal important and extensive fisheries in her own territorial waters, these fishing areas prove to be insufficient for her needs. The growth of her population and the gradual depletion of her own fisheries because of incautious exploitation have been largely responsible for this state of affairs and have made it imperative for Japan to seek new sources of fish and to turn to the Russian fishing areas, which are tremendous in extent and in abundance.

IMPORTANT RIGHTS

Prior to the Russo-Japanese war of 1903-'04 the Russian Far Eastern fisheries were generally closed to foreign exploitation. But one of the concessions obtained by Japan as a result of the Treaty of Portsmouth, which terminated the war, was the acquisition of a series of important and far-reaching advantages and privileges in the Russian fishing waters. In 1907 a special fisheries convention was signed between Russia and Japan which was to regulate the participation of Japan in the exploitation of the Russian fisheries.

In accordance with this convention the Japanese were placed generally on an equal footing with the Russians so far as the commercial exploitation of the fisheries was concerned. The only exception was that the Japanese were forbidden to engage in fishing in the mouths of rivers and in a specified list of bays and inlets. Outside of that, however, all the fishing areas placed under exploitation by the Russian government were open on a basis of equality to both the Russian and the Japanese fishermen through a system of bids, held annually.

The fisheries convention was originally signed for twelve years and, consequently, expired in 1919. By that time Russia had already gone through several stages of her revolution, and the group which actually controlled the territory comprising the fisheries was the Kolchak government, at Omsk. With this government the Japanese opened negotiations concerning the status of the fishing industry in the Russian waters after the expiration of the convention. It was finally agreed between the Japanese government and Kolchak's Ministry of Foreign Affairs that the convention of 1907 would remain indefinitely prolonged, pending the establishment in Russia of a fully recognized government, which would then take up with Japan the question of the original convention.

For several years prior to the expiration of the fisheries convention Japan had been pressing upon the Russian government a number of important modifications in the operations of the Far Eastern fisheries. The most important of these modifications urged by Japan was the removal of the restriction of fishing areas as far as the Japanese are concerned, which consisted in their being prohibited from fishing in the mouths of rivers, in bays and certain inlets.

The Kolchak government fell at the beginning of 1920, and on February 24, 1920, the Japanese Consul General at Vladivostok, in a note addressed to the Primorsk Zemstvo administration, which was then in control of affairs at Vladivostok, announced that the Japanese government decided to take the matter of safeguarding the interests of its subjects engaged in fishing in the Russian waters directly into its own hands. In accordance with this decision, he demanded from the Vladivostok authorities that Japanese fishermen be left in undisturbed possession of 189 fishing areas which they held under long-term leases, and also of 118 areas the leases to which expired in 1920. The payments for the leases were to remain identical with those which obtained during the preceding year, and the sums thus collected would be placed in the hands of the association of Japanese fishermen in Russian waters, which would place them on deposit in a proper institution subject to the order of the existing authorities.

The note ended with the following significant statement:

Thus, the above-mentioned decision of the Japanese government does not signify any intention on its part to acquire new rights or interests and does not permit the Japanese to engage in fishing in such areas as have not until now been under exploitation. Moreover, it respects fully the rights of Russians holding fishing areas for ex-

This was the situation in 1920. A year later, however, at the beginning of 1921, the Japanese government decided on a different policy. On January 17, 1921, the Japanese Consul General at Vladivostok presented to the existing Russian authorities there a note which defined, in five demands, the policy which the Japanese government decided thenceforth to pursue with regard to the Russian fisheries, and this policy, even on the face of it, was a very drastic one.

DRASTIC POLICY

The reason assigned by the Japanese government for the drastic character of the policy upon which it had determined was that the Japanese fishing interests had suffered grave injuries during the preceding years because of the disorganised state of affairs existing in the Russian Far East. In view of this, "the Japanese government, expecting no improvement in the situation in the near future," proposed the following measures:

1—All payments for leases, whether from Japanese or Russian lessees, must be deposited in banks chosen for that purpose by agreement between the Japanese government and the existing Russian authorities. The Russian authorities can divert only one-third of the total deposits to their own uses. The other two-thirds must remain untouched until the end of the annual season, when a special agreement must be made between the Japanese goverment and the Russian authorities as to the disposition of the sums thus accumulated. The purpose of this provision is to make possible for the Japanese government to make adequate compensation to such of the Japanese fishermen as would find their property destroyed or injured during the season by partisan bands, etc. The amount thus involved during the season of 1921 was estimated at 1,200,000 yen or about $800,000, of which $400,000 would thus be tied up, subject to a disposition authorised by the Japanese government. The Japanese Consul General at Vladivostok would be empowered to make a periodic examination of the accounts concerned with these sums.

2—The Russian authorities must indicate the valuation of the various fishing areas offered at the bids.

3—Navigation licenses and other papers required by Article XI of the fisheries convention, normally issued by the various Russian consulates in Japan, can now also be issued by Japanese authorities.

4—The Japanese lessees acquire the right to engage boats for the service of a group of areas issued by them, either in their own name or together with Russian lessees; to transfer their equipment from one lease area to another at the expiration of the lease and to leave their own guards for the winter to guard their shore property. To the first two of these rights the Kolchak government consented in the course of negotiations with the Japanese in 1919. The Japanese note states that it merely reiterates the position thus reached. With regard to the third, according to the note, the Kolchak government refused categorically to grant its consent on the ground that the exercise of that right on the part of the Japanese would be tantamount to Japanese colonisation. The Japanese note considers such fears unfounded and insists on the exercise of the above right.

5—The Japanese acquire the right of engaging in fishing in rivers, bays, and inlets restricted by the convention of 1907, except such localities as are restricted anyway for strategic or breeding purposes.

After enumerating these demands the Japanese Consul General informed the Russian authorities that the Japanese government was determined to put them into operation, stating that, in the case of refusal on the part of the Russians to accept the demands, "the Japanese government would be compelled to take such measures as it would consider necessary for the defense of the interests of its subjects," though "taking of such measures would be undesirable so far as it was concerned in view of the fact that friendly relations exist between Japan and Russia."

VIOLENT OPPOSITION

This note aroused violent opposition on the part of all Russian groups. The Primorsk Chamber of Commerce filed a comprehensive protest, stating that the throwing open of the river and inlet fishing areas to the Japanese would merely tend to put Russian fishing interests out of business; that the taking over by the Japanese of the coastwise shipping of fishing equipment would really put the Japanese in full control of all of the Russian coastwise trade in the territory; that the establishment of a system of a published evaluation of leases would put the Russians at a great disadvantage as compared with the Japanese; and finally that the whole position taken by the Japanese government is utterly incompatible with either Russia's national honor or with the vital economic interests of the Russian Far East, since the Japanese would be permitted to have a control over the disposition of the sums paid in for the leases, which constitute Russian property.

However, no official reply to the Japanese note was given until March 14, when the government of the Far Eastern Republic proposed that all the questions involved should be taken up by a special conference of representatives of Japan, the Far Eastern Republic and Soviet Russia. In the meantime the Japanese agreed to a postponement of the annual bids, which were to take place at the end of March, and finally agreed to permit their subjects to take part in the bids, leaving the question of a Russian acceptance of her demands open for the time being.

The Japanese note of January 17, 1921, referred to the fisheries generally. But the Japanese were already in actual control of two of the most important fishing regions, viz., those of Sakhalin and Kamchatka.

Finally, in April, 1922, when the time came for holding annual fisheries bids in Vladivostok the Japanese government carried out the threat contained in the note of January 17, 1921, and announced that it would thenceforth refuse to recognise any Russian jurisdiction over the fisheries whose administration is concentrated at Vladivostok, by permitting its nationals to hold fishing permits directly from the Japanese authorities without the instrumentality of the bids system as carried out by the existing Russian authorities. The Vladivostok government, as well as various public organisations, have again protested against this, considering this action a direct violation of the existing convention.

A COMPLICATED SITUATION

All this creates an extremely complicated situation as far as Japan's relation to the Russian Far Eastern fisheries is concerned. It is very significant that in the note of January 17, the Japanese government justified its five demands on the ground that it considers their acceptance by the existing Russian authorities as the only method whereby "Japan's rights under the fisheries convention can be safeguarded in the present situation." And then, just before uttering the threat which we quoted above, the note contained the following, even more significant statement:

It is self-understood that as soon as there exists in Russia a legal government which would safeguard the interests of the Japanese fishermen, the whole fishing industry will be placed again on its former basis.

This statement constitutes a definite and important promise on the part of Japan. The eventual fulfillment of this promise is inextricably bound up with the whole sum total of her present activities in the Russian Far East. As we have already seen in the vitally important question of the fisheries, the fact of the Japanes military occupation of the island of Sakhalin and of the mouth of the Amur River—which occupation she has no intention to end under her present policy—gives into her hands tremendously valuable privileges which she does not enjoy under her treaty arrangements with Russia. She promises to give up these special privileges and advantages, as well as others which she at present possesses by virtue of her presence in Siberia as direct accompaniments of the military occupation.

The real test of Japan's promises will come when she will be called upon to do this, for that alone will prove her sincerity in asserting that she is not actuated by a desire to take an unfair advantage of Russia's temporary plight. There is scarcely another "hang-over" from the discussions which came within the purview of the Washington conference that is more fraught with possibilities of future complications than the one concerned with Japan's relation to the Russian Far East. But there are not likely to be any complications if Japan proves equal to this difficult, but really determining test.

U. S. Cotton Crop Is 71.2 Normal, Report

The following report has just been received by the Shanghai office of the American Commercial Attache:

"The Crop Reporting Board of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture estimates, from the reports of the correspondents and agents of the Bureau, that the area of cotton in cultivation this year (1922) in the United States is about 34,852,000 acres, as compared with 31,678,000 acres, the revised estimate of acreage in cultivation a year ago, being an increase of 7,174,000 acres, or 10 percent.

"The condition of the growing crop on June 25 was 71.2 percent of a normal condition, as compared with 69.6 on May 25, 1922, 69.2 on June 25, 1921, and 76.9 the average condition for the past ten years on June 25.

"A condition of 71.2 on June 25 forecasts a yield per acre of about 151.9 pounds and a total production of about 11,055,000 bales. The final outturn may be larger or smaller than this amount according as conditions developing during the remainder of the season prove more or less favorable crop than average. Last year the production was 7,953,641 bales, two years ago 13,439,403, three years ago 11,420,763, and four years ago 12,040,532 bales."
